It's Great to be a Teacher.

To be a teacher means to be able to tutor so as to develop the the ones being taught so well that they may enjoy life fully. The teacher must know that upon her rests a great responsibility and in the lives of those under her protection sleeps the silent germ of personalities. It is the purpose of this teacher to cause that germ to awake to incite it to duty and to plant within it thots of inspiration. Here the teacher meets the possibility of a great soul. The child in its infantile state seeks an opportunity to acquire knowledge, power and development, to catch glittering glimpses of that great sunlit valley of truth.

Here is the teacher's opportunity to impart knowledge, to develop power, to mould character, and to inspire the child with a leve to know. The impression made upon the child here will control her life and her destiny.

Blessed is the child that comes under the influence of a teacher who demands a clear concept of this great realm of truth for truth's sake.

Finally the child will acquire a truthful habit and wear the badge of true culture. Under the great teacher the child acquires scope for its faculties, power and wisdom for its mind, ears and eyes for its intellect and wings for its soul. The goal of all instruction should result in an enlargement of a greater soul.

The rule is, the child will catch anything. A child is as a thorn amid flying leaves. It catches everything that comes along. All that one needs to do in order to name with an 'c' instead of an 'a' $100,000, will be headquarters for not square up a cylindrical rod realize this truth is, notice the the most useless and the most idiotic ways are taken up by the child at first sight. These actions are in every generation taught to children by the millions, and most brilliant success. And with little more persistence we could teach higher truths which are the very vitals of order and civilization.

We teachers are the props upon which civilization stands. It is largely thru the teacher that the child gets its first precept of life in this great realm of truth. Now if this be true, let each teacher's motto be thus: "Let that they may see your good works."--Frank P. Hall in Pres-

THE FARMER.

Write now of a farmer
Who works so hard all day;
At night he reads the papers
To learn what he should say.
He feeds his city brothers
On the product of his soil;
He gets their hard-earned dollars—
The product of their toil.

In spring he turns his ground,
In spring he sows his seeds,
In summer he destroys
All of the noxious weeds;
And when his crops are gathered
And taken to his barn
It is filled to overflowing
With the products of his farm.

With the products of his tal.

With the products of his tal.

With the products of his tal.

He is the nation's pet,

For he supports the nation

With food and clothes, you bet!

Let's not forget the farmer,

For he is our best friend,

The han the farmer needs it nd when the farmer needs
